Versace's Art Unites Program Benefits Starlight and Gives Our Children a Chance to be Designers

Donatella Versace, of the notable Italian

fashion house, recently collaborated with the New York Whitney Museum's Education Department to create Art Unites, a global initiative aimed at providing children in need in the United States and China with the incomparable spirit, creativity, inspiration and solace that visual arts bestow. As part of the Art Unites program, Versace provided canvas and art supplies to 500 children from Starlight and 900 children from the One Foundation to create original drawings using the theme of "friendship." Each child's work of art will be fashioned into a one-of-a-kind Versace canvas tote bag which will be sold worldwide at Versace boutiques and the Gilt Groupe, a member's only ecommerce site this October. The bags are expected to retail for between $200 and $250, and 100% percent of the proceeds from the sale of the bags will be donated equally to Starlight and One Foundation.

To kick off the program, The Whitney's Education department hosted a day of art-making at the museum on July 1 with children from Starlight's New York chapter. Donatella Versace and Ellen Harvey, a leading contemporary artist, were on hand at the party to encourage and inspire the children in the creation of their designs for the tote bags.

Once all of the drawings worldwide are complete, a panel of judges led by Donatella and Adam D. Weinberg, the Whitney's Alice Pratt Brown Director, will select one winning bag from each charity, which will be featured in the Versace runway show this September.
