

A Starlight Family Shares: Quinn's Story

"When Quinn was about 10 days old, I noticed he was vomiting significantly more than what could be considered normal.

At first, the doctor discounted it as 'spitting up.' Then he thought Quinn had acid reflux. Yet, as Quinn struggled with every ounce of food, it quickly became apparent that something else was wrong."

Quinn's mother, Rhyannon, shares more of her young son's inspiring story at www.starlight.org/quinnstory and how Starlight's Great Escapes™ family activities program has helped her family.

"Starlight reminds us that we are . . . not a diagnosis. Our calendar used to revolve around doctor appointments, medical procedures and other 'necessary' events. Those things are still on our calendar, but interspersed with Great Escapes that give us a chance to set aside our fears and frustrations and just refocus."

Havens for Hospitalized Children

It goes without saying that a hospital treatment room can be a very scary place for children.

It is in these rooms where some of the most difficult and painful experiences occur, such as spinal taps, biopsies and other invasive exams.

With this in mind, and at the request of medical staff, parents and kids themselves, Starlight created its Starlight Site™ care room program. One by one, Starlight is beautifully redesigning dreary and intimidating treatment rooms in hospitals across the country into warmer, kid-friendly environments that pediatric patients can relax and feel comfortable in during their hospital visits.

If you would like to learn more about our Starlight Sites care room program, please visit www.starlight.org/starlightsites or contact us at info@starlight.org.

Read more about the newly-dedicated Starlight Site care rooms at Maricopa Medical Center in Arizona and Elmhurst Hospital in New York.
